ROSE VAN SON

Desire

Leschenaultia Macrantha

And yet, if our Earth needed to she could weave us together like roses and make of us a garland Rainer Maria Rilke

speak to me of wreaths, those garlands set like gardens in colours of rose-pink and red, when light seeps in curls your head onto my breast speak to me of words set in garland rounds when sun throws shade to early afternoon speak to me of colour woven leschenaultia flowers garlands, rare and utterly deceiving appearing wanton on sandy plains clasped in Spring's gathering arms
