You may print or download ONE copy of this document for the purpose of your own research or study.

The University does not authorise you to copy, communicate or otherwise make available electronically to any other person any copyright material contained on this site.

You are reminded of the following:

- Copyright owners are entitled to take legal action against persons who infringe their copyright.
- A reproduction of material that is protected by copyright may be a copyright infringement.
- A court may impose penalties and award damages in relation to offences and infringements relating to copyright material. Higher penalties may apply, and higher damages may be awarded, for offences and infringements involving the conversion of material into digital or electronic form.
Use of Thesis

This copy is the property of Edith Cowan University. However the literary rights of the author must also be respected. If any passage from this thesis is quoted or closely paraphrased in a paper or written work prepared by the user, the source of the passage must be acknowledged in the work. If the user desires to publish a paper or written work containing passages copied or closely paraphrased from this thesis, which passages would in total constitute and infringing copy for the purpose of the Copyright Act, he or she must first obtain the written permission of the author to do so.
The composer as bricoleur: Notions of contemporary opera in the genesis of a short film

This thesis is presented in partial fulfilment of the degree of Master of Arts (Performing Arts)

Tsok Wee Yap

Edith Cowan University
Western Australian Academy of Performing Arts
2016
Abstract

This Masters of Arts by research examined contemporary notions of opera in the genesis and production of an original short film through the composer as bricoleur. This research into the area of film, music, and composition, was motivated by a desire to resolve the conflict between the conventions of opera and cinema in presenting contemporary opera as film. In realising the short film, this research examined both cinematic and operatic conventions, with particular focus on the operatic voice, verisimilitude, and the suspension of disbelief as fundamental challenges and conflicts related to unifying opera and film. The adaptations and ideas generated in resolving this conflict came from a practice-led research methodology that encompassed the notion of the composer working as a bricoleur.

Working as a composer-bricoleur, my identity and role throughout the course of the research had to evolve and adapt to challenges as the project emerged. In this role, I was an author, scrap-booker, composer, scriptwriter, director, musician, researcher, audience member and collaborator. Through bricolage, I was able to piece the research and project together, engaging in strategies that included literature and multimedia review; classes in scriptwriting, acting and producing; online blogging; practice trials; resonance meetings; and conscious and unconscious observation. The integration of these strategies and practices led to the creation of the short film Out of Sight / Out of Mind, a social and interpersonal story about a girl and her father, and an accompanying exegesis.

Through this research, the conventions of opera and cinema were revealed to be disparate to and unaccommodating of each other. This was resolved by readapting the operatic voice for film and employing surrealism in the film’s construction. In this contemporary screen opera, the operatic voice included spoken dialogue, affected dialogue, singing and whispering. By working from pre-production to post-production, and applying contemporary notions of composition, I was led to consider the entire audio track of the short film as composition.
In the construction of the film, Out of Sight / Out of Mind, notions of contemporary opera, composition and surrealism were applied. While this resolved a significant conflict between opera and film, it also indicated similarities between contemporary screen opera and screen musicals or other films with music. This raises questions for future study in this area. Principally, it questions whether cinema is merely an incarnation of opera in which the drama unfolds on a screen, rather than a stage.
The declaration page
is not included in this version of the thesis
Acknowledgements

This research is dedicated in loving memory to my parents, Chin Fah Yap and Fee Sim Leong, who taught me so much, and afforded me the opportunities to discover the magic of music. Self-proclaimed to be my “biggest fans”, I’ve missed your honesty and words of encouragement. Regrettably, you never saw me realise my dream of composing for film. This film, inspired by my relationship with my father after the passing of my mother, was a cathartic experience that would not have been possible without the efforts of many individuals.

Among the many I wish to thank are the cast and crew, who invested so much of their time and effort to help me realise the film. Thank you to the Inga family in particular, for their generosity in allowing us the use of their house, and Giuliana, whose enthusiasm and honesty gave me more than I had hoped for in the crafting of Amelia. Thank you to Ann, for feeding us the many times we came over, and for going beyond the call of duty before, during and after the shoot. Damian Foley — thank you for bringing Tony to life and for your insights and creative advice. John Rousselet, thank you for your amazing cinematography and coming along to all the scouting locations and test shots. Justin Thomas, our producer, thank you for bringing together the incredible team, and for your patience in allowing me to finish my thesis before releasing the film.

Thank you to my wise and wonderful principal supervisor, Dr Lyndall Adams, who believed in me, and without whom this project would not have taken shape. Your unwavering support and guidance throughout my masters is the reason I did not give up. Thank you so much for your encouragement and for all your time and effort. Words fail to fully express my appreciation and gratitude.
To my film guru and associate supervisor, Dr George Karpathakis — an abundance of thank yous for assisting me assemble my film crew, and for all your help in shaping how I view and discuss film. To my associate supervisor, Dr Matthew Styles, a big thank you for your insights to the hybridity of music, and for guiding me through academic writing specific to music and composition. To Dr Jo McFarlane, my writing coach, thank you for helping me develop my academic writing voice. To the late Dr Maggie Phillips and the many academic staff at WAAPA and ECU — especially Dr Jonathan Paget, Dr Lindsay Vickery and Dr Cat Hope, who helped me along my research journey — thank you for all your help. Thank you to the amazing Ms Sarah Kearn, the Coordinator for Research Support, who answered all my questions and assisted me with the many protocols, from academic reports to research claims. And, of course, thank you to the WAAPA Reading and Writing group for wine, chips and academic discussion.

To composers Dominik Scherrer and David Chesworth, Ben Newman from OPERA America, the Street Wise Opera Company, GroupMap and Homeless Connect Perth — I am indebted to these individuals and organisations, who answered my emails and sent out documents and materials for me to examine. Thank you for your generosity and willingness to help. To ClubSnap photography group and Panasonic, thank you for organising the amazing photography trip and providing me with a camera and lenses.

Finally, to my beautiful friends and family in Perth and around the world, whose patience and encouragement throughout my research period allowed me to finish this thesis — I am eternally grateful for your love and support.

Professional editor, Elite Editing, provided copyediting and proofreading services, according to the guidelines laid out in the university-endorsed national policy guidelines, The Editing of Research Theses by Professional Editors (available at http://iped-editors.org/About_editing/Editing_theses/FAQ_students.aspx).