Hard Data, Soft Data

Louise Boscacci (University of Wollongong, Australia)

bone nullarbor cradles continent above whale bight gale-face heaths hug limestone pans sand curlews call mirning memories across pink pigface at dawn upland kneebush and bluebush roll ridge to swale

cool blowholes talk emptybellied
of sea wedgetails wait long on karst spirals but woylies and sticknest builders have gone to offshore islands
and the museum records

we listen
hard data
soft data
data
dat
datum
all day older people sing spinifex songs from red sand places there are many dialects
for land
and loss
