January 2011

SALT

Laurel Lamperd

Follow this and additional works at: https://ro.ecu.edu.au/landscapes

Part of the Poetry Commons

Recommended Citation

This Poetry is posted at Research Online.
Lamperd: SALT

SALT by Laurel Lamperd

Since the Holocene,
the sea has been trapped
behind dunes.

It roars
like a raging lion
ready to be let loose
on the land.

It sounds louder at night
menacing threatening.

The sheep listen
from their hillock of sand
the sea once covered

Between the sea and the sheep
are salt lakes.
So much water
so much salt.

In the wet years
the water level rises
and brings the salt.
The dry years bring starvation
and the sheep die
but the salt remains.

Now there is less grazing land.

It is a race between us
and the salt.

We plant trees.

It is war between us
and the salt.

We plant.

The foe is merciless
still we plant.

Laurel Lamperd lives on the south coast of Western Australia. She writes poetry, short stories and novels. Many of her poems and short stories have been published in newspapers, magazines and on the net. She has published six books of fiction. Print and download are available on Amazon, Barnes and Noble, Smashwords and various other sites. Her website and blog are at www.authorsden.com/laurellamperd