Foreword

A Children’s Services Human Resource Management is based on the policies and procedures that define the staffing requirements for the effective operation of the children’s service. The total process of staffing, from advertisement to employment, is based upon the specific criteria that is determined for the particular position required. Thus, the entire process is designed to provide the children’s service with the best information necessary to select the most appropriate person for each staff position in the team.

Consequently, well defined inclusive personnel policies and procedures enable each member of staff to understand the duties, skills, knowledge and responsibilities of their position within the team and their interactions within the structure of the service. This humanistic perspective, which has a focus upon interpersonal relationships, and the ecological perspective, which has a focus upon interaction and relationships between all levels of structure, are the perspectives from which this manual was derived.

The development of this document was a result of an initiative by Boogurlarri Child and Family Services to ensure that all people involved with the programmes provided by Boogurlarri, understood the part they played in the planning and delivery of the programmes to the community. It was also designed to ensure requirements of the Quality Improvement Accreditation System ‘Part D’ were developed and implemented. Consequently this document describes the staffing process in a comprehensive manual outlining in detail, the requirements of each person’s position from advertisement to employment to evaluation.

I wish to thank Boogurlarri Child and Family Services for allowing the use of material from their manual to provide realistic practical examples that can be used a guide for similar children’s services who wish to develop their own Human Resource Manual.

Organisational Chart

Staffing Process

This section will take you through the first process in developing a human resource management manual with the development of an ORGANISATIONAL CHART. It then creates policy and procedures for the staffing process to be developed in your service in line with your organisational structure.
1.1 Organisational Chart

The first step in developing a Human Resource Management Manual is to be clear about how your service is structured. All organisations need structure. However, it is how you view the concept of "structure" that will determine the ultimate structure of your organisation. Structure should not necessarily be seen as something that is rigid and formal. It can be viewed as something that is dynamic, develops as the roles and relationships within the service interact and develops from decisions that these roles and relationships continually make (Dawson, 1986). That is, structure is capable of change.

Each service will have its own structure that meets its own distinctive needs depending upon the roles played within the service. For example, a funded community managed service like Boogurlarri Child and Family Services, may have a different structure to a private funded service. Whatever your service, it needs structure so people working within your service can feel confident that they understand their roles, responsibilities, relationships and, most of all, the overall structure of your service.

To graphically display your structure you can develop an Organisational Chart. To develop this chart, ask yourself the following questions.

- What framework have you used to develop your service?
- What are the main goals of the service?
- Who are all the people that comprise this service?
- What roles do each of these people play?
- How do these roles interact?

Now let us examine each of these questions.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>What framework have you used to develop your service?</th>
</tr>
</thead>

A framework helps to focus your structure and provides you with a useful way to analyse how all the components in your structure fit and interact with one another. Usually, your Philosophy has been derived from theoretical frameworks so use your philosophy in determining your human resource frameworks. When developing this manual we used two frameworks.

(i) Ecological Systems framework. This framework focuses upon the importance of the interrelationships between all persons or systems that comprise the structure (that is, the community, parents, providers, children...). It suggests that all persons or systems are dependent upon one another in order to be effective and together, they provide a holistic perspective to human resource management. For further explanation on this framework, refer to Bronfenbrenner (1975).

(ii) Management framework — the human relations approach. This framework "emphasises topics such as leadership styles, morale, and group interactions and relationships" (Jones & May, 1992, p41). It suggests that the structure goes beyond that seen on the traditional organisational chart as it includes all the informal relationships that occur within services. For further explanation refer to Jones, A. & May, J. (1992), Chapter 2.

These frameworks then become the backbone of the Organisational Chart.

What are the main goals of the services?

The goals are usually derived from the development of the service’s Philosophy. Most services will have long term goals such as: to meet the needs of families attending the service by developing mechanisms that ensure interaction occurs between the community, families, operational staff and management; and to ensure integration occurs between children’s needs and the programme plans developed by the staff. These goals can be achieved by referring to the framework/s you developed earlier. In our example, the frameworks we used focused upon interrelationships between all persons. Therefore, our goals reflected this approach. The goals could be achieved by setting in place such mechanisms as parent-staff feedback sheets, newsletters and social gatherings.

Who are the people that comprise these services?

Community members
Families utilising the services
Staff members
Volunteers
Students
Licencing Body and Funding Authority

What roles do each of these people play?

Community members participate in the management of the services by providing their expertise, supporting the people who operationalise the services and ensuring that the services meet the needs of the community.

Families utilising the services ensure that their needs are met, from both an individual perspective in which, (in day care), the care that their child receives is appropriate to the development of the child, and from a family perspective in which, (in day care), their particular requirement of care is satisfied.

Staff members operationalise the services according to the particular role they play in the service.

Volunteers provide support for the services at the operational level, the management level and the community level.

Students assist in the operational level of the service, provide new and or updated information to people within the service and use the service to practice and refine their skills under the direction of skilled workers.

The Licencing Body and Funding Authority ensures the service is accountable in meeting the community and financial needs by regulations and guidelines.
How do these roles interact?

This is a crucial question which requires careful consideration by your service. Before you can answer this question you need to understand the meaning of interaction. Interaction requires all persons in the interaction to be "active" participants and have a common goal which they seek to achieve.

For Boogurlarri Child and Family Services, the common goal was developed through the Philosophy, Purpose, and Mission Statements. Mechanisms for interaction to occur were developed through formal documents such as the Policy and Procedure Manual and the Human Resource Manual, and informal mechanisms such as representation on the Management Committee, in house in-service/discussion programmes, Parent Feedback Sheets, Newsletters and social gatherings.

Once you have answered these questions you can then develop your Organisational Chart in a graphical form, as in Figure 1 overleaf.
1.2 The Staffing Process

Once we had developed our framework/s and structure we began to develop our staffing process. According to Hildebrand, staffing is a process of recruiting and dealing with the human resources required to perform the functions of the centre (Hildebrand, 1993, p99). Thus, it is important to remember that this is a process, which requires careful development if the service is to be effective in meeting its philosophy and goals. Each stage in this process will be developed throughout the manual. Policies and procedures relating to students and volunteers in children's services centres will be discussed further in the manual. However, you need to develop a policy statement, derived from your framework to begin your staffing process. An example of our policy statement follows.

Policy

Boogurlarri Child and Family Services Centre staffing process reflects the philosophy of the Centre and respects the worth of each staff member's contribution to the team. The Centre makes optimum use of this valuable human resource to meet the needs of children, their families and the community.

Procedure

1. The Management Committee determines the staffing positions required to operate the service effectively to meet the needs of children, families, community and the statutory regulations.

2. Policy and procedures for "Staff Selection" are developed. Refer to SECTION 2.

3. Staffing documents: Advertisements, Duty Statements, Position Classification, Selection Criteria and sample interview questions are developed for each position. Refer to SECTION 3.

4. A process for orientation of all staff is developed. Refer to SECTION 4.

5. The Staff Professional Review process is developed. Refer to SECTION 5.

6. An in-service process is developed. Refer to SECTION 6.

7. A Staffing Handbook is developed. Refer to SECTION 7.

8. A policy for working with Students and Volunteers is developed. Refer to SECTION 8.
This section develops a Policy and Procedure for staff selection. Children's services are highly labour intensive and it is the people who are employed by the services that enable the philosophy and goals of the service to be realised. Therefore, it is important for the policy and procedures to reflect the needs of the service. An example of such Policy and Procedures follows.
2.1 Staff Selection

Policy

To employ staff who have a concern, knowledge, skills and a motivation for providing the most appropriate environments for developing children's optimal growth and development.

Procedure

1. The Director, in consultation with the relevant Co-ordinator, creates the advertisement for the vacant position.

2. The position is advertised in the following forums.

- 2.1 Cook Local community paper
- 2.2 Handy person/Gardener Local community paper
- 2.3 Bookkeeper Local community paper
- 2.4 Support worker Local community paper
- 2.5 Cleaner Local community paper
- 2.6 Caregiver Local community paper West Australian
- 2.7 Creche worker Local community paper West Australian
- 2.8 Caregiver qualified Local community paper West Australian
- 2.9 Caregiver (OSHC) Local community paper West Australian
- 2.10 Supervisor (OSHC) Local community paper West Australian
- 2.11 Co-ordinator (OSHC) Local Community paper West Australian
- 2.12 Co-ordinator (Day Care) Local community paper West Australian
3. All applicants responding to the advertisement are sent the Application for Employment Package [See Appendix 1], which includes the following.

- A covering letter from the Director of Child & Family Services.
- Duty Statement for the position.
- Position Classification for the position.
- Outline of the Selection Process.
- Format for Application.

4. A Staff Selection Committee for short listing and interviewing is created comprising:

   4.1 for all positions excluding the Director of Child & Family Services:
        the Director of Child & Family Services;
        1 Staff member;
        1 Management Committee member.

   4.2 for the position of Director of Child & Family Services:
        2 Management Committee members (Chair + 1);
        1 Co-ordinator of another Centre;
        1 Regional Children's Services Officer (Department of Community Development).

5. 5.1 The Staff Selection Committee meets and reads all applications.

5.2 Each application is evaluated in accordance with the Selection Criteria [See Appendix 2 for an example of such a working document].

5.3 A short list of applicants who meet that criteria (usually up to 5) is determined.

6. All applicants not short listed, according to the criteria, are notified of their unsuccessful application. [See Appendix 3 for an example of a letter to unsuccessful applicants].

7. All short listed applicants references are checked and recorded. [See Appendix 4 for an example of a form used to record information from a referee].
8. An interview timeline is determined (approximately 30 minutes per interview). It is important to leave the room for breaks to keep the selection members fresh and not rushed.
All short listed applicants are notified of their interview time and the interview venue. This is usually carried out by telephone but may be done by letter.

9. The Staff Selection Committee, pre interview.
The Staff Selection Committee meets 15 minutes prior to the first interview in order to:
9.1 familiarise themselves with the Selection Questions;
9.2 determine the role of each person on the Committee, ie. who will lead the interview, who will ask what questions, how the information will be recorded. [See Appendix 2].

10. The Selection interview.
10.1 All applicants are welcomed by the interview leader and each member of the Staff Selection Committee is introduced to the applicant.
10.2 The procedure for the interview is explained to the applicant.
   [It is important to keep to the pre-determined timeline].

11. The Staff Selection committee, post interview.
11.1 The Staff Selection Committee reviews all the applicants’ answers to the Selection Questions.
11.2 Each applicant is then ranked according to:
   11.2.1 their answers to the Selection Questions;
   11.2.2 their referee reports.
11.3 The applicant with the highest ranking is recommended for employment to the Management Committee.
The applicants in second and third position are considered reserves.

12. The successful applicant is notified by letter and is requested to inform the Centre of their acceptance or non-acceptance of the position offered.
   [See Appendix 5 for an example of a notification of employment letter].

13. When the acceptance letter is received, the applicant is sent the documentation pertaining to that position.

14. All applicants that were interviewed and unsuccessful are notified by letter.
   [See Appendix 6 for an example of a letter notifying unsuccessful applicants].
B. Relief Staff

1. The need for relief staff is identified by the relevant Co-ordinator in discussion with the staff team and in consultation with the Director.

2. The relief position vacancies are advertised in the local community paper.

3. Respondents are requested to send in their application to the Director of Child & Family Services.

4. A Relief Staff Selection Committee comprising the Director of Child & Family Services and the Co-ordinator (day care) or the Co-ordinator (OSHC) read the applications and select those applicants that meet the Position Classification criteria for an interview. These applicants are notified (usually by telephone) and given the interview time and venue.

5. Those applicants that do not meet the Position Classification criteria are notified by letter that they have been unsuccessful.

6. Those applicants that are successful in the interview are given a trial period within which their practical suitability is determined. In day care, 3-4 hours; in outside school hours care, 2-3 hours.

7. If the applicant is suitable, they are notified by letter and put on the relief list. [See Appendix 7 for examples of relief list forms].
Section 3

Staffing Documents:

Duty Statements
Position Classification
Selection Criteria
Sample Interview Questions
Sample Advertisement

This section analyses each position and determines the skills, knowledge and experience required to perform the functions of that position in the service. The material in this section meets, in part, requirements of Principle 49 in the Quality Improvement and Accreditation System.

Each position has five (5) areas, these being: Duty Statement; Position Classification; Selection Criteria; Sample Selection Questions; and Sample Advertisement. All of these areas are interrelated and developed in a step by step process as shown in Figure 3.1: Process for Developing Staffing Documentation. Each of these areas are examined, with positions in Boogurlarri Child and Family Services providing examples of this important process.
Step 1

Undertake an analysis of the tasks required to perform the particular position you are seeking to fill. This task analysis provides you with the following information:

- the purpose of the position;
- the duties required to perform the position;
- the responsibilities required of the position;
- to whom the person is responsible;
- the salary and conditions of the position.

The outcome of this Step is to provide you with a Duty Statement for the position.

Step 2

Once you have developed the Duty Statement you are able to develop a Position Classification for the position. The Position Classification specifies the level of qualifications sought; any experience required; and the skills and knowledge required to perform the position.
Step 3

From both the Duty Statement and the Position Classification, the Selection Criteria are developed. The Selection Criteria list the criteria that are determined as both essential and desirable for the position. If a criteria is determined as essential then the prospective candidate must meet that criteria. Sometimes, you may be seeking other criteria that are not essential to performing the tasks of the position but would be advantageous for a person to hold. It is these criteria that are deemed as desirable. The Selection Criteria is used for two purposes. Firstly, to inform the prospective applicant of the requirements of the position so they can address them in their application and secondly, to advertise the position.

The Duty Statement, the Position Classification and the Selection Criteria are used in the development of the Professional Review Process discussed in detail in Section 5.

Step 4

Using the Selection Criteria, questions to interview applicants are created.

Step 5

Using the Selection Criteria, the advertisement for the position is created.

The following positions are provided as examples following this step by step process.

  Cook
  Handy Person/Gardener

Boogurlarri Child & Family Services

Boogurlarri is an equal opportunity employer
Most new employees arrive for the first day of work full of enthusiasm and excitement. This initial interest can either be put to positive use, or destroyed, depending on how it is nurtured. (Cadwell, 1988, p3)

This section outlines the process for orientating new staff to the service. Indeed, Principle 49 of the Quality Improvement and Accreditation System states, in part, that:

New staff members should be introduced to other staff and to parents. Existing staff should welcome new staff members, and time needs to be made available for them to discuss the children and program so that continuity can be provided. (Putting Children First, 1993, p103)

Orientation is an important process in human resource management and is indeed a critical time. It is when the new staff or student develops their perceptions about the service. Not only do they see if they are made to feel welcome but also, they see how well organised the service is. Documentation needs to be provided to new staff to review during the orientation period.

Our orientation process commenced with the development of a policy that would ensure all staff received an orientation that would provide them with an understanding of the service and their role within the service. Procedures that would implement this policy were then created.
4.1 Orientation for Staff

Policy

All staff will receive an orientation to enable them to commence their duties with an understanding of Boogurlarri Child & Family Services programmes, philosophy, policies and procedures.

Procedure

A Management Committee representative will meet with all staff at their orientation or before they commence their duties.

Section 5

Research reflects that more than half the professional and clerical employees working today do not understand how their work is evaluated. (Maddux, 1987, p10)

The Professional Review process provides the staff member with an opportunity to self assess their work with the guidance of their supervisor, within well defined guidelines, that are clear to both the staff member and the supervisor.

The Professional Review process operates from two perspectives. Firstly, there is the management perspective, as outlined in Figure 5.1, and secondly, there is the individual perspective, as outlined in Figure 5.2. Both perspectives have their beginnings in the development of the staffing documentation. (Refer to Section 3)

Management is responsible for the implementation of the Professional Review process. Management provides in-servicing to assist staff in understanding the process and using it to enhance their personal development. All written records resulting from this process are signed by both parties and copies are provided to the individual staff involved in the process. Through this process, management encourages the self-development of their staff which, in turn, produces greater job satisfaction and a feeling of control by the staff member.

The Professional Review process is designed for the individual to assess their own performance against the criteria stated for the position they hold. Through discussion with their Reviewer, who also assesses their performance against the same criteria, the individual is able to create a Personal Development Plan that states the goals they set for themselves that will enhance their own personal performance. They then request the support of management to assist them to meet all or some of those goals.

The policy and the procedures for implementing our Professional Review process are set out below. The forms designed to meet the requirements of the process are attached in the Appendices 11 and 12.

Remember, Professional Reviews are an essential communication link between two people with a common purpose. (Maddux, 1987, p6)
5.1 Professional Review Process

Policy

Each staff member employed by Boogurlarri Child & Family Services will participate in an annual Professional Review to assist them in enhancing their performance, both professional and personal, in working with children, families and the community.

Procedure

1. All staff members are "in serviced" on the procedure for undertaking their professional review to ensure they feel comfortable with and understand the procedure.

2. The review is at least annually from time of commencement or by negotiation with the Reviewee and management.

3. One month before the review interview:
   The Reviewee is notified of their Reviewer;
   The Reviewee is given the Professional Review forms to read and begin to fill out (See Appendix 11);
   The Reviewee's Reviewer is also given similar Professional Review forms to fill out (See Appendix 12).

4. A date is arranged at this time for the Review interview between the Reviewee and their Reviewer to ensure all parties are aware of the time-line.

5. Both the parties complete the Professional Review forms.

6. At the Review interview, each party discusses their responses to each section in the Review. Any disagreements are discussed and recorded on the forms as "disagreements".

7. Both parties sign and date the Professional Review form.

8. A Personal Development Plan for the Reviewee is created through discussion between the Reviewee and the Reviewer as an outcome of the Review (See Appendix 11).

9. Both parties decide on the next review time.

10. Both parties sign and date the Personal Development Plan.

11. Both parties receive a copy of the Professional Review forms and the Personal Development Plan.

12. The Centre Management Committee is notified that the Professional Review has taken place.
The in-service process is designed to ensure that the skills, knowledge and tasks of people in the service keep in line with those in their profession.

The Duty Statements clearly indicate that each person has the responsibility to attend professional development training. By including this in the Duty Statement, the staff are aware that in-service training is not an “add on” to their normal tasks but is “inclusive”. This also meets the requirements of Principle 50 in the Quality Improvement and Accreditation System which states:

The quality of the program in any centre depends on staff having up-to-date knowledge and understanding about the development of children. Pre-service and in-service courses provide the necessary training, and participation in these courses should not only be permitted but encouraged. Research has indicated that trained staff deliver care that better enhances the development of children than does the care delivered by untrained staff. (Putting Children First, 1993, p104)

The in-service process is developed from two perspectives. Firstly, from the perspective of the individual staff member, as part of their Professional Review Process (Section 5) and secondly, from the perspective of management, as part of the Co-ordinator's/Director's observations of needs in the management and operation of the Centre.

Before developing their Personal Development Plan (see Section 5), an individual staff member decides on ways in which they intend to enhance or further develop their performance before the next review (See Appendix 11). This is done by asking them to identify future training needed to improve their performance on the criteria stated for their position. In order to assist the staff member in locating their desired in-service training needs, management needs to provide the necessary information. This becomes part of the management perspective. Firstly, management assists in meeting the desired training goals of the staff and secondly, through observation, suggests training needs that will enhance the performance of the total centre in providing an effective service that meets the needs of families and children. These two perspectives are intertwined throughout the process as no one perspective is more important than the other as shown in Figure 6.1

Figure 6.1 The Outcome of the Two In-Service Perspectives

The Policy and Procedures for developing an in-service process is now outlined with examples of documentation in Appendices 13 and 14.
6.1 The In-Service Process

In-service programmes can take many forms: meetings of the entire staff; individual attendance at organised programmes outside the service; in-house skill development; and conference attendance.

Policy

Each Staff member employed by Boogurlarri Child & Family Services will participate in professional development/in-service programmes to keep them up to date in their professional field and enhance their performance (both professional and personal).

Procedure

1. All staff in each programme will have access, via handouts or the notice board, to training schedules developed by the training agencies.

2. The Director/Co-ordinator will inform all staff of any additional training available.

3. Each programme will discuss the type and content of in-service that it may require to enhance its performance. This is to be recorded on a six monthly or annual planner.

4. Each staff member will record the type and content of in-service they require as a result of their professional review process on the planner.

5. The Co-ordinators will devise an in-service programme based on the needs of the programme and the needs of the individual staff members. (See Appendix 13)

6. The Co-ordinators will present their in-service programme, with funding implications, to the Director.

7. The Director will co-ordinate all in-service programmes to avoid duplication across programmes and ensure the in-service policy is being implemented effectively.

8. Once approved, the in-service schedule for all programmes will be given to each staff member and placed on the notice board. (See Appendix 14)

9. After attendance at an in-service programme, staff will report the main issues/strategies and new knowledge presented at the in-service, to other staff members in their programme’s staff meeting.
Section 7

The Staffing Handbook

New staff should receive a staff handbook outlining the centre's beliefs and values (philosophy) and its goals. The handbook should detail policies relating to enrolment, guidance and discipline, health matters, fees, staff holidays and centre management. It should also include the names of management committee members if appropriate. (Putting Children First, 1993, p103)

The Staff Handbook is an important document that must be made available to each staff member on the commencement of their employment. It sets out in detail, their responsibilities, tasks and commitment required to performing their job in an effective and productive manner. You may find, as we did, that much of the information required for producing the handbook is already available in other documents within the Centre. In such cases, this information just needs to be collated. However, if time to carry out such a task is not immediately available, a Handbook noting where staff can have ready access to this information can be developed as an interim measure. For example, Policies and Procedures can be obtained from the Centre Policies and Procedures File available at the front desk or the Centre Philosophy is available from the Parents' Handbook and the chart in the entrance of the Centre. Access to this information is essential for effective and productive performance.
7.1 Staff Handbook

Policy

All staff are to have access to information that directly relates to their employment and conditions, so as to enable them to successfully implement their responsibilities as members of the Centre team.

Procedures

The Staff Handbook contains the following.

1. The Centre Philosophy.

2. The Centre Goals.

   (These have been developed in a separate document entitled “Policies and Procedures”)

   (Refer to Section 2 of this document)

5. Staff Conditions.
   (Refer to the appropriate award)
   These include Duty Statement, Position Classifications. (Refer to Section 3 of this document)

4. Orientation of Staff.
   (Refer to Section 4 of this document)

   (Refer to Section 5 of this document)

8. Professional Training and Personal Development.
   (Refer to Section 6 of this document)

Volunteer persons and students, from a range of early childhood training institutions, are valuable assets who provide considerable amounts of human capital to children's services each year. Students, through their professional placement programmes, gain valuable 'hands on' knowledge working with experienced staff in realistic settings. As members of the community, they have needs that must be met if they are to achieve their goals. In return, centres receive input from the students on current practices and research in their professional field. Children's services centres must decide whether they have the ability to support students and volunteers in their programmes. Carefully thought through policies can ensure that the experiences, both for the centre and the students or volunteers, are positive and pleasurable.

Volunteers [and students] must be recognised and given positive feedback. Because they receive no money, which is part of the positive feedback for staff members, giving volunteers [and students] plenty of praise and recognition is essential...(Hildebrand, 1993, p140) Parenthesis added.

This section examines policy and procedures for including students and volunteers in the Centre programmes with additional documents in Appendices 8 and 10.

This Booklet must be completed by you before you meet with your Reviewer.

The booklet is designed to enable you to work at your own pace in assessing how you feel you have performed on the stated criteria for your current position. Take your time working through each section until you feel it matches your current performance in this position.

When you feel comfortable with your own assessment of the criteria, sign the booklet and take it with you when you meet with your reviewer.

The Reviewer has also completed a similar Booklet. Together you will discuss each section and come to an agreement on your current level of performance on the stated criteria. The Booklet will then be signed and dated by yourself and your reviewer.

Then, together you will develop a Personal Development Plan which sets out ways in which you intend to enhance or further develop your performance over the next year. This Plan is developed from your responses to Questions 2 to 4 in the Booklet. At the conclusion of the Personal Development Plan, a time is set for the next Professional Review. The Plan is then signed by you and your Reviewer. A copy needs to be kept by management as it contains ways in which they are required to assist you to meet your goals.

This Booklet must be completed by you before you meet with your Reviewee.

The Booklet is designed to enable you to work at your own pace in observing the Reviewee's level of performance on the stated criteria for their current position. Take your time working through each section to ensure your observations clearly identify the Reviewee's current performance in their position.

When you feel comfortable with your own assessment of the criteria, sign the booklet and take it with you when you meet with your Reviewee.

The Reviewee has also completed a similar Booklet. Together you will discuss each section and come to an agreement on the Reviewee's current level of performance on the stated criteria. Criteria that result in disagreement on the level of performance are identified. The Reviewee's Booklet will then be signed and dated by yourself and your Reviewee.

Then, together you will develop a Personal Development Plan which sets out ways in which the Reviewee intends to enhance or further develop their performance over the next year. At the conclusion of the Personal Development Plan, a time is set for the next Professional Review. The Plan is then signed by you and your Reviewee.
